1. The parasympathetic nervous system is often described as the __________________ of your autonomic system—a kind of antidote to the effects of ____________ created by the sympathetic system.

   a. What other “business of living” functions does the parasympathetic nervous system perform?

   b. The biggest anatomic difference between the parasympathetic and sympathetic nervous systems has to do with the _____________________________ that they form as they reach throughout your body.

   i. The nerves of your parasympathetic division are ________________.

      1. Some of your cranial nerves also carry ___________________________ that control voluntary functions, and others carry only ______________ _____________, which relay data to and from your sensory organs.

      2. What are the twelve different cranial nerve names?

         a. What mnemonic can help you remember all the nerve names?

         b. What mnemonic can help you remember whether they are sensory or motor (or both) neurons?

   3. What is the function of the vagus nerve?

      a. For some people, eating is a way of ________________________________

      b. ____________________ is the key to life.

      c. ____________________ is actually dominant, keeping down your sympathetic response.